

THE DAILY REBEL.

FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 19, 1863.

From the Front.

We are just up from the front; full of dust, but also full of matter for one of those astonishing disquisitions, speculative and military, which from time to time illuminate these columns; a little travel-worn too, but not weary; for who can be weary that is just out of the magic circle that glimmers about the gallant Hardee, or the ennobling atmosphere which gives something of the cathedral to the presence of the warrior Polk, or the genial influence of our estimable friend (Col. Walter) the Adjutant General, or lastly, and by no means least, the distinguished affability and benign complaisance of that Prince of the Court circle, the ever attentive Oldowick?

But seriously—whereby we mean soberly and in good part—the writer hereof has taken his usual quarterly inspection of the army in Middle Tennessee, and has returned to make his semi-official report; for in this democratical free press government of ours the "envoys" demand a certain insight into the goings on about them; and the editorial Inspector General—occurred of the Great Captains, but the beloved of rank-and-file, as also of the Conscriptive office—the editorial Inspector General are held to a strict accountability; they are expected first, to give the exact position of each army corps, division, brigade and regiment; second, to divulge the plans and programme of the commander-in-chief, with all the details; third, to philosophize upon the "situation" in the manner of the London Times and the Atlanta papers; and lastly, to let Braxton Bragg have it heavily over the shoulders!

If, on the present occasion, we prove somewhat heedless of the above formula, we shall be pardoned the irregularity for the sake of the novelty of what we shall say; because, the truth is, an affection of the profound, the severe, or the magniloquent is rather too much for this hot weather, and the approach of the dog-days; we are happy to chronicle the army in admirable health, physically and morally, and to note the fact, that Braxton Bragg has done nothing of late which entitles him to anything but the respect of the country, and the regard of his soldiers.

The hullo-balloo of ten days ago turned out a veritable "much-ado-about-nothing." It hardly bruised the cobwebs off the inertia of camp life; and if that poor dog they call Rosecrans can do no better, he had as well cease his impotent snarl at the front of our lines, and betake himself to Vicksburg, where Grant needs him bad enough. If he fail to do so, he may wake up some morning and find Forrest and Breckenridge, via Spring Hill and Franklin, suddenly occupying his rear, and perhaps the fortifications on St. Cloud. We give him the benefit of this hint, because he is welcome to make what he can out of it. We also direct his especial attention to two or three little maneuvers recently enacted upon one of his flanks, to which he seems to have been singularly obtuse. Indeed, Rosecrans is a most stupid ass, and aside from considerable energy, some adroitness and immense "put on" and clap-trap, is as intolerable a fool as knave.

But at the present moment all is quiet in front. It is a dead calm. The troops are enjoying a May day picnic. They toll upon the grass of the green woods, stroll along summer brooks, engage now and then in a review for the sake of the tender sex, attend dinner parties and hops.

"And dance all night
Till broad daylight
And go home with the girls in the morning!"
The officers are all in full dress. The warm weather costume becomes most of them amazingly, and their "fery, untamed steeds," in good condition, gaily and gaudily prance over the smooth woodland roads of Bedford as though conscious of the holiday season. There is also some very serious matrimonial speculation in progress, and a famous amount of flirting. In a word, all parties, male and female, are "making hay while the sun shines." And God be with them!

Vicksburg is the "front" of the army of Middle Tennessee. Upon that hangs the tale of the therein mutual inactivity. It is the pivot of the campaign in the Southwest. Its fate once decided and the drama will heat below us again, and the roar of hostile cannon break upon the murmur of streams, the voices of fair women and the everlasting hum of nature and summer. When that time comes we shall not fear the result. The "pluck" of the army is more intense perhaps than it ever was, and the discipline superior. The return of so many regiments from Mississippi—which, by the way, we believe an error, for we do not need them here—augments the forces to impregnability. Let the enemy therefore come.

"And dam'd be he
Who first cries, 'hold, enough!'"

Disipation in Paris.

The corruptions of Parisian society have been strikingly illustrated on two or three recent occasions, by sudden gusts of passion which, sweeping away the thin screen of ceremonial observance reveal the rottenness within. The trial and the mysterious whitewashing of the banker Mires, the scandal of the Garca and Colzado affairs, and several similar occurrences, the reports of which have lately filled the letters of Paris correspondents and the columns of the French journals, show how society is demoralized, and how the gamblers and courtisans find their way into places which should be sealed against them.

All this vice is glossed over by the wit and fancy of the French, but it exists. One of the shrewd literary journals of England puts the case thus: Aspasia is as beautiful as her portraits; her saloons are as fashionable, her reunions as popular and glittering. The nobles of the land are at her feet; historic names are upon the cards in her ante-chamber. The ancien noblesse of France, driven from the Senate and the legislative assemblies by an imperial parvenu, seem to have emigrated into her boudoirs. Wit and mirth and fashion may possibly be found collected under her roof, for Attic salt is not wanting at the festivals of Corinth. Many an Alcibiades, who has never had the ambition to be a statesman; many a poet who has never taken the trouble to sing; and here and there an embryo philosopher, who has never chosen to reflect, mangle and make merry in the crowd. The dice rattle and the wine flows. The prodigal sons are liberal, and the embues of this society are kind. To the minds of la jeunesse dorée, these seem to be the suppers of the gods—notes casneque deorum. A duel in the morning or a fortune ruined over night does not detract from the charm, while it adds to the excitement of the scene.

There is nothing unreal about vice in the saloons of the Parisian coteries. The checks which are bright and rosy over night do not turn to pallor in the morning. Black care does not sit upon the crupper of the horsemen and horsewomen who flutter gaily in the fresh spring sunshine up the Champs Elysees to the Bois de Boulogne. The demi-monde has nothing to be ashamed of, for the demi-monde has become the recognized centre of Paris life.

Little Adelinea Patti in Trouble.

The charming little song bird has come to grief, or rather she has just come to her senses. The Paris correspondent of the Courier des Etais has, writing under date of May 22, says a journal of Paris had received from London, and was to publish on Sunday night, a note in English written and signed by Adelinea Patti, wherein she invokes the intervention of British justice against her family—the family, on this occasion, being represented by Messrs. Patti, father, and Strakosch, brother-in-law. Miss Adelinea complains that she has seen every penny of her earnings, amounting to more than a hundred thousand dollars, swallowed up by the aforesaid Patti and Strakosch. This, however, is but a little thing in comparison with another exercise of parental authority. She was sought in marriage by a rich and honorable Spanish gentleman; her heart responded favorably, and Patti, the father, had once agreed to the arrangement, in case the young man's family consented. The young man's family did consent, but the lady's father refused to do as he had agreed, interdicted all correspondence, and allowed no interview between the betrothed and her lover. Adelinea now demands to be removed from under this tyranny, and to be placed in the tutelage of the Court of Chancery during the seven months remaining before she becomes of age. She declares, at the same time, that she has no intention of seeking any pecuniary return from her father and brother-in-law, but that she freely abandons what they have so unceremoniously grabbed.

It is truly refreshing to mark the troubles which rise thicker and faster in the Yankee tabernacle. At the last meeting in New York invective was even louder than ever from the speakers who have been laying the corner stones of agitation. McMaster, for example, appealed to physical force and arms to resist the Administration. Judge McCunn said that there was but one course for them—"Liberty or death." Mr. Blankman said that Julius Caesar had his Brutus, and Charles I. his Cromwell, and counselled resistance to the draft on the ground of the war being unconstitutional. Mr. Rankin warned the people that they might never see another Presidential election; for the Government wanted to make rebels of the freemen of the North, that they might have a chance to subjugate them by the strong arm of military power. Mr. Bergmann said the United States Government was, like some of the European despotisms, becoming absolute and tyrannical, and the people were not prepared to submit to the sacrifice of their liberties. Mr. Birdsall declared that Lincoln to be a miserable apology for a President, and his Government a vile despotism. Mr. Van Loan appealed to their strong arms to protect their rights in the last extremity. Mr. Caldwell reiterated the same sentiment. Mr. Mulhally denounced the war as an Abolition war, and it was continued we would have a king at Washington.

We direct attention to the card in another column of the Chaplain's of Hardee's corps, to the army and resident ministers. The Chaplain, generally, have been laboring with energy—preaching, holding prayer-meetings &c. Christians in the army have joined them in their efforts to do good. They have been assisted also, by Rev. Doctor McFerrin who is missionary to Bragg's army. Many soldiers—officers and men, have professed the Christian faith and quite a number have been baptised. At a late meeting, the Chaplain, estimated that from seven hundred to eight hundred soldiers in Hardee's corps, have recently made profession of religion, while hundreds more have become serious and prayerful. The good does not stop here. Men, heretofore outbreking in wickedness, are, in many instances restrained. And it has been remarked that, in those regiments where the moral reform has been greatest, the men are more cheerful and prompt in their military duties.

The "20th Tennessee" is a sharer, to some extent, in the good work. In Polk's corps, the religious interest, we understand, is quite as great as in Hardee's. The "Soldier's Christian Association," organized in many regiments, promises to be useful.

We observe several notices in the Yankee papers of the operations of "Gen." Starnes. We are sorry that this distinguished and meritorious officer bears as yet, only the commission of Colonel, although he commands a brigade. Very few of our cavalry officers deserve a better recognition than Col. Starnes. His exploits in Middle Tennessee last year—within the enemy's lines—were less notorious than they would have been at any other period. They were characterized by celerity of action and boldness of conception and were universally successful. The people of Tennessee fully appreciate them and their hero, and it is the universal wish that the War Department should take into consideration the claims of one so worthy and of deeds so valiant.

The pressing of negroes into service in Nashville must be creating quite an excitement among the American citizens of that city, of "African descent." One of the Yankee editors now in Nashville, a few mornings since, was in Parrish's shaving establishment, when an announcement was made that the pressing was going on. Instantly the sweetened water complexioned negro who was attending to tonsorial wants, made for the bath room, Moss fainted and fell into the looking-glass, Ned tipped over a glass of sulphur water into a gentleman's bosom, while the proprietor, who has traveled all over Europe, Asia, Africa and New Jersey, complained of a sudden attack of rheumatism. At last accounts, however, all was quiet on the Po-matum.

The whereabouts of Kirby Smith is a theme of general inquiry and interest. One thing may be relied on, and that is that he is, in army parlance, "around." He will turn up some where some of these days, and then "look out for snakes" for they will wreath out of his cannon and hiss from the mouth of his rifle. Especially let the "American citizen of African descent" beware. It is a popular axiom now in the West, that "When ever Kirby pulls a trigger, He's pretty sure to 'fetch' a nigger!"

Joseph Koch and Harden Crinshaw, (says the Nashville Press of the 11th,) arrested on the 7th inst., by order of Col. Baird, for cutting telegraph wire during the recent battle at Franklin, Tenn., were sent to the city yesterday, and placed in jail, to await trial by military commission. Another accomplice in this work, Wm. E. McKay, was released on testimony of Dr. Cliff that he (McKay) was an idiot.

We are not in a panic about Vicksburg. There is no occasion for fear. We are anxious—we are serious—we are prayerful; but we are not frightened. With wary Jo Johnston, adroit Kirby Smith, and steadfast Pemberton we rest our hopes, and it still blooms forth good fruit. Be of good cheer, for the day of resurrection will surely come.

The Chaplain's of Hardee's corps invite all Ministers of the Gospel in the army, Missionaries to the army and resident Ministers to attend the meetings of the "Chaplain's Association Hardee's corps." Time of meeting every Wednesday, 9 A. M. Place, at present, Baptist Church, Fairfield.

By order of the Association.

Jno. A. Ellis, Sec'y.

Vallandigham is doubtless safely out of the Confederate States by this time. He may possibly turn up among the Knickerbockers under the protection of Gov. Seymour. In any event his prospects for the Governorship of Ohio are good.

The negro battalion in Washington, in passing the prison where the Confederate prisoners were, halted and groaned then. If any of our boys ever get hold of the black rascals they will soon be past all "groaning."

Banks' Corps d'Afrique has been pretty well used up. We have often heard of an army corps knocking the "black" out of its enemy, but this is the first instance of one having the black knocked out of it.

Gen. Sam Houston lately remarked that "if the Yankees pestered him much more, he'd shoulder a musket himself, old as he is."

The literary interest of the South are at the present moment very active, and books appearing in abundance from the Richmond and Mobile press.

The return of Vallandigham to Ohio next fall as Governor" says the Cincinnati Enquirer, "will be a sight worth seeing." That it will.

The "Freeman's Journal" comes down rather heavily upon Fernando Wood, and what it terms the "New York State Democracy."

We learn as we go to press that the nominee of the Winchester Convention for Governor is the Hon. Robert L. Caruthers.

The Convention of the Episcopal Church which was to meet the third Wednesday in June is postponed until further notice.

The most extensive swindle in the way of a Western land warrant, is believed to be the Grant of Vicksburg.

The French are gaining important advantages now over the Mexicans.

VALUABLE HORSE LOST.—Lost on June 8th a large Bay Horse, from the camp of the 24th Alabama regiment, near Fall Creek, Tennessee. Said horse is a bright bay, about 8 years old, about 16½ hands high, with white face, one or two white feet, rather a stylish animal. A liberal reward will be paid for his return to W. A. Cochran, Sergeant 24th Alabama Regiment, Mangum's Brigade Withers' Division, Polk's Corps A. T. [Jul 1-4]

DIED.—At the Academy Hospital, in Chattanooga, Tennessee, June 16th, 1863, Dr. LAWSON M. WATSON, a citizen of Murfreesboro', Tennessee, Surgeon of the 10th Mississippi Regiment.

DIED.—In Chattanooga on the morning of the 8th inst., Edmund Jones, son of David H. and Callie J. Echols, aged 13 months and 15 days.

"Jesus said suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Our Little "Egbert Jones."

Spring looks graver, sadder, than e'er Spring looked before.

For a tiny little coffin has passed from our cottage door.

Within its pale cover they laid the bit of clay.

And to Grand Pa we've carried him, far on the cars away.

Oh! God! we know thou art good—that thou art just and kind.

Thou givest and thou takest away, as best doth suit thy mind.

But, oh! God! that thou wouldn't have spared our baby boy.

To fill with pride his Father's heart—his Mother's heart with joy.

His childish glee we'll never forget—his smile so heavenly sweet.

As he passed away the hours with merry noisy feet.

And how with his tiny arms he clung about my neck.

And for every kiss received, his lips would pay another back.

But now, oh! God! to thee consigned, we trust on little freight.

For angels have borne him freely, joyfully through the golden gate.

A mother's tears have wet the sod where thought but dared not tread.

A father has signed o'er the spot where lies the lifeless clay.

Tis hard, our Father, to yield such gems, when life has scarce begun.

Yet, on our knees we humbly pray—Thy will, oh! God, be done."

[ADVERTISEMENT.]
BRIDGEPORT, ALA., June 12th, 1863.
MR. FRANCIS M. PAUL: I am again forced to defend myself by an advertisement which appeared in your issue of 10th May, 1863.

I now repeat that W. H. Harrison is not, and never has been, a member of my company. I do this most emphatically. He was not known in the reorganization at Knoxville, when I was elected Captain, and has never been on my roll. Lt. Reed, has made a statement which he knows to be untrue to say the least of it. I am in possession of facts which show that Harrison was mustered into the State service of Tennessee for twelve months, and he never was mustered into this company, and I repeat that he is not, and never has been a member of my company. If he is dodging the service, it is no fault of mine, and no man will be more ready to arrest him than I. I am not defending Harrison, but myself.

I have the former Captain's statement which says that Harrison does not, and cannot belong to this company, unless he can be regularly mustered into it. I make this statement in pure self defence, and I am prepared to maintain it in any event.
